DOUGH ROSE ALL RIGHT.

The Embarrassing Experience of a Kind-Hearted Housewife of Skowhegan.

A medicine bottle, a mirror and a bunch of keys, all sticking to a chunk of dough as large as your head, was the sight, says the Lewiston Evening Journal, that met a Skowhegan woman's view when she opened her satchel in the Skowhegan car en route to Lewiston, Me.

She had wondered for some time what it was that was swelling out the sides of her satchel in such an unproportionate manner, and she opened the satchel to find out. She struggled to close it, but she could not. The man in the rear seat looked over her back to see what the matter was. The conductor stopped to look at her in her helpless state.

"What's the matter, madam?" he inquired.

"Oh, nothing. Bread is rising, can't you see? Oh, get away!"

She got her fingers in the dough and then she got mad. She tried to pull them. She tried to close the satchel, but it would not close.

"Confound that thing," she said, and the satchel, comb, mirror and dough disappeared out through a window.

When she tells her friends about the case now she laughs at the horrid fellow-passenger and conductor, but she did not feel like it then.

She was coming to visit a friend in Lewiston. This friend admired her bread very much and said it was the best in the world, so, not having any bread ready to bring with her, she seized upon a large piece of dough which was rising in a pan before the fire and wrapping it in a napkin she placed it in her grip with the above result.

KNEW ALL ABOUT HIM.

Husband No. 2 Was Quite Familiar with All the Good Points of His Predecessor.

It was a contested will case, and one of the witnesses in the course of giving his evidence, described the testator minutely.

"Now, sir," said counsel for the defense, "I suppose we may take it from the flatterer description you have given of the testator, his good points, and his personal appearance generally, that you were intimately acquainted with him?"

"Him!" exclaimed the witness. "He was no acquaintance of mine."

"Indeed! Well, then, you must have observed him very carefully whenever you saw him?" pursued the examining counsel.

"I never saw him in my life," was the reply.

This prevarication, as the counsel thought it, was too much, and, adopting a severe tone, he said:

"Now, now, don't trifle with the court, please. How, I ask you, could you, in the name of goodness, describe him so minutely if you never saw him and never knew him?"

"Well," replied the witness, and the smile which overspread his features eventually passed over the court, "you see, I married his widow."

PRIMATE OF ENGLAND.

Dr. Davidson, Bishop of Winchester. Succeeds Dr. Temple as Archbishop of Canterbury.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Randall T. Davidson, bishop of Winchester since 1895, has been appointed archbishop of Canterbury, in succession to the Most Rev. Dr. Temple, who died December 23.

Dr. Davidson was offered the archbishopric of Canterbury on the death, in 1896, of Rev. Dr. Benson, the predecessor of Dr. Temple, but he declined the post, as his health then was precarious.

As archbishop of Canterbury Dr. Davidson becomes also the primate of all England, as was Dr. Temple.

Dr. Davidson was one of the group about the bedside of Queen Victoria when she died. He was a great favorite with her majesty, and used to be called "the Queen's bishop." No member of the Episcopal bench it is said, has more friends among the common people. Frank and democratic, he has won his way to the hearts of many thousands.

Dr. Davidson began his career as a hard-working curate, became chaplain and secretary to Archbishop Tait, married the daughter of the archbishop, and on his father-in-law's death succeeded him as chaplain to the queen. He next became dean of Windsor, was then made bishop of Rochester, and afterward went to Winchester, one of the oldest and wealthiest bishoprics.

Dr. Davidson once confided to his people that it did not pay to be bishop of Winchester, even at $12,500 a year.

He is reckoned as one of the most progressive of the Anglican clergy. He is 53 years old and was educated at Harrow and Trinity, Oxford.

FAN ON LOCOMOTIVE.

Unique Method for Lighting a Railway Train Discovered by an English Inventor.

A novel way to get electricity for lighting a railway train is described by Cassier's Magazine. The favorite method nowadays is to provide each car with a small dynamo, which is driven by the axle. The current is first led to a storage battery composed of only ten coils, so as to have a supply of electricity when the train is standing still. A less satisfactory plan is to put the dynamo on the locomotive and drive it with steam from the boiler. The scheme which Cassier's reports is a variation of this latter one.

FAN ON LOCOMOTIVE. (New English Method for Lighting a Railway Train.)

It includes a dynamo that is located on the engine, perhaps under the pilot, but the power for it is derived from a rotary fan or windmill immediately above, under the headlight. As the locomotive travels at the rate of 20, 30, or even 40 miles an hour, a breeze of corresponding velocity is developed. The current is conveyed to small accumulators under each car of the train. It may be assumed that when these are fully charged the current is automatically cut off. Tests are said to have been made with an outfit of this kind, and the results are said also to have been encouraging, contrary to what one might be led to expect.

Sew Heart Between Beasts.

A remarkable surgical operation was performed at the City hospital at St. Louis, to save the life of Edward Spilker, aged 19, who had attempted suicide by shooting himself in the left breast. An aperture was made at the wound and between pulsations the wound in the heart was closed with three stitches. The bullet had also perforated the apex of the left lung. A portion an inch and a half was cut away, a heavy silk ligature tied about the lung, draining tubes being established and the chest cavity closed. The patient speedily rallied and it is believed he will recover.

SMART OLD TERRIER.

They Couldn't Fool Terry, Who Is a Wonderful Dog.

When Sent on Errands He Always Comes Back with the Right Change—Won't Stand for Film-Flam Game.

"That dog looks as if he might know something," said the new traveling man, who had just paid his bill at the Howland house at Chester, N. Y., and was starting to catch his train. He referred to Terry, the Scotch-Irish terrier, who had come in with a piece of the Edward's dog's ear.

"Know something?" said Baldy, the landlord. "I only wish you'd mentioned it last night and I'd have had time between then and now to tell you at least one-half of what that dog knows. Can't wait over a train and hear some of it, can you?"

The new traveling man said he couldn't.

"Well," said Baldy, the landlord, "you've got plenty of time to hear me tell you that one of the smart things about that dog is the way he goes to the meat market and buys things. Take liver, for instance. Whenever I want a pound of liver I give Terry a quarter and tell him to go over to Bill Osborne's butcher shop and get it. He'd get a pound of anything else, of course, but just take liver for an instance. Bill knows what he wants, weighs him out the liver, gives him ten cents change, and back Terry comes with the goods. And he always waits for the change, you bet, and—"

"But why don't you give him just the 15 cents, so he won't have to bother with waiting for the change?" interrupted the new traveling man.

"Well," replied Baldy, the landlord, "I tried that once and Terry dropped a nickel of it out of his mouth and he'd never go after meat again with more than one piece of money, so I have to let him take a quarter. One day Bill Osborne tried to put off on him a ten cent piece with a hole in it, but Terry wasn't doing errands just for his health, and he wouldn't stir a step out of the shop until he got a good dime.

"KNOW SOMETHING"

"They used to try all sorts of ways over there to fool him. At last Osborne thought he'd try him on the short change trick, and one day gave him a nickel instead of a dime for change. They had been fooling with Terry so much that he had lost all patience so when he found that they thought he was such a chump as to stand for the film-flam game, what do you think he did?"

"Took the butcher by the neck, I suppose," said the new traveling man.

"No, no!" exclaimed Baldy, the landlord. "He ain't any of your common, every-day biting dogs! What Terry did was this. He walked right out of the shop, hunted up Bill Wood, the deputy sheriff, took him by the coat and led him into the butcher shop and straight up to the man who had thought he could film-flam him out of his right change. Yes, sir, he did, as much as to say, 'Here! I want to arrest this fellow!'"

"Well, the butcher knew what he meant and they don't try any of their jokes on Terry over there any more. Terry got his right change, and he marched home with his meat and his dime, and with an air about him that said as plain as words that butchers get up pretty early in the morning, but they'd have to get up a good deal earlier if they wanted to fool him! Yes sir, and—"

But the new traveling man said he guessed his train was coming, and he hurried away.

Dog with Lots of Sense.

A dog whose master had often taken him about the city in cabs was lost recently in a crowded part of town. After nosing about for a long time, trying to find his way, he suddenly spied an empty hansom, and, running after it, jumped in and settled himself on the seat. The driver tried to get him out, but he only barked and snarled. Then, seeing a name and address on the dog's collar, the man guessed he was lost and started home with him. When the cab turned into the street where the dog's master lived, out jumped the four-footed passenger and ran joyfully up the steps of his home. The cabman followed and rang the bell. When the dog's master heard what had happened he not only paid the fare, but gave the cabman a handsome present besides.
